London, 19 September 2016

Your Excellency,

We, the Bar Human Rights Committee of England and Wales, EuroMed Rights and the Cairo Institute for Human Rights Studies, together with the undersigned Bar Associations and Law Societies, are writing to you to express solidarity with lawyers in Egypt.

We condemn the arrest and continued detention of lawyers for reasons related to the performance of their professional functions. We express concern at the recent increase in the number of arrests of lawyers who provide counsel and representation to human rights defenders. We further condemn the use of extended pre-trial detention without a reasoned decision for refusing conditional release, capable of constituting a punitive use of pre-trial detention. We also note with concern that no official records are publically available as to the number of lawyers arrested and detained. We further condemn the intimidation and harassment of lawyers who seek to promote and defend human rights. We attach, by way of annex to this letter, a non-exhaustive list of lawyers about whom we currently remain extremely concerned.

We recall the right to liberty, the rights to freedom of expression and association, the right to an effective remedy, the right to equality before the law, and the prohibition of discrimination as contained in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the African Charter of Human and the Public Freedoms, Rights and Duties to which Egypt is party, and enshrined in Chapter Three of the Egyptian Constitution. We further recall the United Nations “Basic Principles on the Role of Lawyers”, which is based on recognised and accepted human rights standards enshrined in other international instruments ratified by Egypt.

The role of the lawyer is a crucial element of any functioning democracy. Lawyers serve an essential role in the protection of human rights and constitutional principles and in furthering the ends of justice and the public interest. It is a fundamental duty incumbent on the State to protect lawyers and to ensure that they are not prosecuted or threatened with prosecution or with other sanctions for the exercise of their professional duties. The State must also ensure that lawyers are able to perform their legal functions without intimidation, hindrance, harassment or improper interference.

The recent arrests and detention of lawyers by the Egyptian authorities, their intimidation and harassment, constitute a prima facie of breach Egypt's obligations under international human rights conventions and under its own Constitution. Further, they appear to constitute an assault on the integrity of the Egyptian justice system and on the rule of law.

We call upon you, as a matter of urgency, to take immediate steps to:

1. Cease the continuing arrests and detention of lawyers for reasons related to the performance of their professional functions
2. Review and, where appropriate, withdraw all investigations and criminal charges against such lawyers
3. Restore and guarantee respect for the rights of lawyers and human rights defenders
4. Release all lawyers currently being detained in violation of international human rights laws and standards and domestic obligations
5. Ensure full protection for lawyers from further intimidation, harassment or obstruction in the performance of their professional duties
6. Respond favourably to the request of the UN Special Rapporteur on the Independence of Judges and Lawyers to conduct a country visit to Egypt and permit the visit
7. Reaffirm and uphold Egypt's commitment to the rule of law and human rights

We the undersigned appreciate your attention in this matter, and ask that you kindly reply letting us know what steps you propose to take. We thank you for your kind consideration and look forward to your positive response.

Yours sincerely,

Signed,

Kirsty Brimelow QC
